Bachelor of Applied Science – inverted major degree

This is an inverted major degree – i.e. the major used for the bachelor's degree is based on the field of study completed within the LMC associate's degree – usually an Associate in Applied Science. The student coming in for a BAS has already completed the body of work for his major and takes the liberal arts, minor area and elective classes required for completion of the bachelor's degree.

There are a few different pathways to the BAS – encourage a student who has a body of occupational classes, military experience or work experience/training/licensing or certifications to meet with a SHU advisor about putting together a degree plan. This can include technical training in industry, allied health, public safety, and many other fields.
